The same civil-rervice law that guards and shields the non-political official from summary removal because he is not of the same faith as the administration, also forbids the public functionary advantage of his partisan friends. The meaning of Mr. Cleveland's pronouncement cannot be reassuring to Republicans in office. Few of them are guiltless of the sins that he declares will "forfeit their retention" in Local Causes Operate to Mitigate or Intensify Extremes.

A Wet Winter Generally Followed by a Wet Summer, and Vice Verna.

Junitra, Tax. Duc. 19.

To the Editor of the Sazutte. A late French eclentist has said: "The time is not far distant when the husbandman can predict the character as to avoid the severe losses occasioned by extreme wet and dry seasons." If this statement is ever verified, it must be in a general way; for it is evident to the most essual observer that local causes will ever operate either to mitigate or intensify extremes of heat or cold. A residence of meny years on the Western prairies will convince those who have resided in the East that the country lying between the Rocky mountains and the Mississippi, or the timbered region adjacent are or the timbered region adjacent. ubject to extremes of heat and co moisture and dryness, which are for-eign to ilmbered countries and which may be easily accounted for. During our long dry summers the a cloudless atmosphere penetrate to a great depth, and thus a large amount of heat is stored. When the blizzard or norther, follow-ing the sun in his refreat, reaches this heated district the temperature is lowered, and this is repeated at each stage of advancement until an excessive humidity is produced in the at-mosphere which gives usour occasional warm, wet winters.

Again, excessive rains on this great prairie ocean keeps the earth cooled and prevents the storing of heat during the summer months, and when the cold wave rolls over [this treeless expanse it meets with no resistance, which gives us our occasional sovere winters.

In proof of the above the following is cited: The summer of 1870 was extremely dry and the winter following was remarkably mild. Again, the summer of 1850 was extremely wet and produced a rank growth of vegetation from the guilt to the lakes, and the winter following was one of the severest on record. Extremes follow each other, for the summer of 1881 was excessively dry, dwarfing vegetation from Canada to Mexico, and the winter following was so mild that leaves which were wont to that leaves which were wont to brown in November were yet green in midwinter, and the roads, from con-tinued rains, were almost impassable.
